THE HOUSE OF TRANSMUTATION

By GEORGE ALLAN ENGLAND

A TALE OF MODERN MIRACLES AND A WEIRD GAME, IN WHICH FATE HOLDS THE WINNING HAND.

ynopsis of Chapters Already Published Dr. Hargreave, the most eminent surgeon in New York, receives a mysterious telephone message demanding his servtees in "a matter of life and death."
He reluctantly promises to accept the case. A little later an automobile drives up to the door and a gendeman, introducing himself as Mr. Lawior, explains that the case has to do with "a member of his household over in Jersey." He promises to pay, without question, any honorarium the doctor may demand. The great surgeon, accompanied by Lawior, is driven to a ferry, and then, having accepted a cigar from his client, falls assleep.

let me put a question of my own—a most important question. It is true, or is it not, that modern evolutionary science has established beyond all doubt the fundamental kinship between man and the lower animals, so-called? Between ourselves and, say, the apes?

"It is. We are, to put it roughly, cousins several times reserved, to all the anthropoids."

"That is proved?"

"Absolutely."

"How so?"

"Well, first by analogy. The skeleton, the dentition, the muscles, the functions of man and the higher apes are practically parallel. Only men and apes grow bald in old age. Second, by ontological research and embryology, with which I will not burden you at present. Third, by obscure yet highly significant physiological identities."

"For example?"

"Our blood and that of the higher anthropoids is almost identical. The corpuscles are alike. Man's blood and that of the apes will transfuse without of the species. Man and the apes are both subject to certain discases which never affect 0 and of the product of
